

FOREVER
1977 Ongoing

In Edwardian times people took little oaths in a serious manner. FOREVER, an Edwardian catchless “Forever Bracelet”, was gifted to me on the occasion of my 14th Birthday. Following the oath or tradition, I was supposed to put the bracelet on, and never remove it, and as I grew, it would eventually become too small and hence unremovable, leaving me to die and be buried with this small gold treasure. Like an Egyptian Pharoah. Well I didn’t grow, I haven’t died, I’m not buried. I removed my treasure at thirty, the age from which we never grow old . . . forever thirty, see if it fits. Coda: The bracelet was stolen on July 25, 2021. Forever (Gone) in another sense.
