

TINY TOWN
2010 Ongoing

Tiny Town is a wee little thing for wee people and has a wee train that drives little ones around a miniature town that the Our Town characters could occupy. It's located in base of the Eastern Face of the Rockies, in Colorado near Red Rocks, the famed music amphitheater . . . But rather than that more adult whatever entertainment of "The Rocks" it's like a celebration of Christmas Windows that one can walk around without the Christmas, except st Christmas . . . So it has just everything from the regular Joe house, to the fire department, to the Unsinkable Molly Brown's mansion to the Home Depot . . . And I just have been obsessed with the idea of replicating the Colorado Building—where the Dikeou Collection resides—and it is a fabulous example of bricolage—Beaux Arts, Art Deco, and Mid-Century Modernism, with a mix of Dragnet in there . . . So "wee" set about getting into this world of that place that is Tiny Town, literally and with a physical permanent structure in this false little town . . . It will reside there, that lovely gem with windows that allow little visitors to see artists' work reproduced by 3-D printers, xerox machines, even artists . . . Alas, look but do not touch.
